Forgive the pun, North Fork coffee lovers, but you're going to like this news a lot. On Jan. 17, Hampton Coffee Company opened its fourth espresso bar and café in Aquebogue, a historic shop — originally a 1940s-era garage and service station that has been lovingly restored and repurposed and features plenty of green technology — is the company's newest location.

“Our fans have been asking us to come to Riverhead and the North Fork for a long time now. We get asked all the time,” says Jason Belkin, co-owner of the company. “South Fork customers live on the North Fork and come south for work or to visit family around. And so many of our customers are local tradespeople from both forks who live in the area and customers throughout the East End and wanted to be able to stop at a Hampton Coffee Company matter where their job would take them that day. Now that we opened on the North Fork, we really found out how true this really is.”

The café — already bustling — offers all of the Hampton Coffee favorites: the company's signature Organic North Fork Blend, (and on-premises), Hampton Classic Blend coffee, and plenty of fresh, homemade breakfast and lunch. The Aquebogue outpost has a new and exclusive signature Organic North Fork Blend.

“While all our cafés have a similar menu of coffee drinks and food, each has its own personality,” says Belkin. “Our Aquebogue location is a 1940s service station that we kept everything exactly the way it was in the ’40s and worked around it to bring it up to Energy Star standards. Even some aspects that were lost over the years we rediscovered, like gooseneck lights over the sign out front. They were in the old photos, but they were taken down in the ’70s, so we incorporated the old style back into our renovations. Our Aquebogue café is participating in Single Stream Recycling, so everything that goes into the trash gets recycled right here actually, locally on the North Fork. About 90 percent of our supplies come from fellow Eastern Long Island purveyors.”

This commitment to sustainability and localism is part of what makes Hampton

Company so special. One-hundred percent of the eggs they use are cage-free. made up entirely of locals. They support more than 100 different local chariti
